

Boxing Fans Jam Madison Square Garden as First Bouts Are Held Under Sanction of the New State Law

WELLING IS VICTOR PROCLAIM JUDGES

Dundee Has Best of Slow, Uninteresting 15 Round Bout at Garden.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

Joe Welling, the Chicago lightweight, has the honor to win the first boxing contest staged in this State under the Walker law at Madison Square Garden last night. Welling received the decision of Judge William Madison and Charles Thayer, who ruled in his favor in the first of the 15 rounds of the bout. Dundee, who was the challenger, was disappointed in his customary spectacular manner, but the slow footed Welling turned the contest into a most aggravating affair.

Welling tried desperately from start to finish to land a knockout blow on Dundee's jaw, but he utterly failed in his object. The other hand Dundee used with the greatest effect in the bout was his left. He landed a series of blows, the last of which was a right hand to the head of Dundee, which was the only one of the series to land.

The decision of the judges awarding the bout to Welling was a distinct surprise to the spectators and was not well received. The fight degenerated into a boxing match in the early rounds and was largely a waste of time.

Welling weighed 135½ pounds to 145½ to Dundee. The most interesting contest of the night was between Andy Chaney of Baltimore and Tommy Noble of England. The Baltimorean gave the British an exciting, dramatic and hard fought battle at the close. Joe Benjamin, the California lightweight, outpointed Pete Hartley in a fairly interesting ten round bout.

Sammy Nable, former amateur champion, defeated Bobby Hanson in a spirited six round contest. Last night's bouts under the sanction of the Walker law were held in the presence of a throng that jammed the arena to its utmost capacity.

It was the first time in twenty years that a bout of fifteen rounds to a decision had been boxed in the Garden. The judges, who were Charles Thayer, who had taken seats on opposite sides of the ring, and Bill Brown, who sat in the center, were unanimous in their decision.

Two thousand people tried to get in after the Garden was closed and continued to stand in line stretching three deep for two blocks for more than an hour, hoping to get past the ticket windows. Thirty policemen were sent from nearby stations to keep traffic clear.

The fans were orderly, and there was no rumormongering of any kind. About 300 women entered the Garden, it was estimated. Senator Walker, author of the bill, was introduced, but contented himself with a bow and a smile. Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier entered the ring, shook hands and smiled in a friendly way at each other. Tex Rickard was introduced and then Joe Welling and Johnny Dundee began their fifteen round encounter. The Italian showed his customary speed and scored points from the onset over his slowmoving opponent.

Sammy Nable, former amateur champion, and Bobby Hanson, a Brooklyn flyweight, were the opponents in the opening bout of six rounds, and they got down to business without delay. Hanson was a willing brawler, but Nable was the better boxer, although he started his work by consistently clinching. Nable staggered his man several times and brought both to the Brooklyn boys' nose and mouth. Both were fighting hard at the close. The judges agreed on Nable.

Joe Benjamin, the California lightweight, weighing 135 pounds, and Pete Hartley, a veteran weighing 134½ pounds, were the contestants in the second bout, scheduled for ten rounds. Hartley had the better of the first few rounds, dealing heavy body blows to the San Franciscan. The old chap tired in the latter rounds and Benjamin punished him severely with a right and left to the face. The judges agreed on Benjamin.

Andy Chaney of Baltimore, leading rival of Kilbane and Tommy Noble, fought a featherweight champion of England, were next on the program in a scheduled ten round bout. Chaney took the lead early in the contest, delivering effective lefts to the face and heavy right to the body. Noble was aggressive but was outclassed in boxing and clinching. In the later rounds Noble clinched consistently and was a thoroughly beaten boxer at the close of the tenth round. The judges had no difficulty in selecting Chaney as the winner.

HANDSELETTA BEST POLO PONY IN SHOW

Thoroughbred Mare Wins Cup at Meadow Brook.

MEADOW BROOK, L. I., Sept. 17.—Ideal weather brought to the international polo field at Meadow Brook to-day many of the best thoroughbred who represented nearly every polo organization of the East.

They came to attend the second annual polo pony show. Ponies that have competed in international events as well as those newly trained to the game were entered and in addition a number from the United States Army. There were sixteen classes in all. G. M. Hockner's Landseletta, a clever and speedy thoroughbred mare, won the cup for the best pony in the show. There were other entries, and so close was the competition between the winner and the runner-up, that the judges had to go to the aid of the Landseletta.

Upjohn's mare, a second year colt, was the best pony in the show. There were other entries, and so close was the competition between the winner and the runner-up, that the judges had to go to the aid of the Landseletta.

"Buddy" Ensor Rides Five in a Row at Aqueduct

Noted Jockey Living Simple Life and Gaining Host of Friends.

By HENRY V. KING.

Lawrence "Buddy" Ensor, the little jockey who is under contract to R. T. Wilson, was the sensation of the racing at the Aqueduct track yesterday afternoon. He guided five consecutive winners and finished second on another. He won the opener on Clara Francis, a 2 to 1 shot, and took the second on Tippley Whitehead. Then he puffed a cigarette or two and came back and rode Yellow Hand to an easy victory in the third, and guided home Thunderstorm in front in the fourth. In the fifth he had the leg up on Edward Arlington's King Arripa, and by the sixth he had won the sixth on Johnny Loftus. He landed his last mount the winner by a length. In the final he had the leg up on Our Boody and won by a length by Quercus, ridden by Joe Moore.

For his six riding the young jockey was greeted with vociferous applause every time he returned to the scales. He is a popular figure at the track, and his friends are growing in number. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number.

Ensor has been known to be a great rider for several years, but he is a permanent youngster and time and again he strayed away from the narrow path and "played" Broadway and other light districts rather than his home and his riding. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number.

But never during his career was he so much of a thoroughbred as he is now. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number. He is a simple life, and his friends are growing in number.
